Chromax Golf Balls

The Inner Core

The 1.52 inch diameter core is one of the largest in golf history. Made with a poly-butadiene rubber compound blend, molded under high temperatures and extreme pressure produces a core with superior durability, elasticity and a high coefficient of restitution. The high energy core is perfectly centered to ensure a consistently straight flight.

The Outer Cover

A poly-resin blend creates the outer cover. The resin cover of the Chromax ball brings forth a new level of performance. Superior cut resistance, cold temperature flexibility, high spin rate, and high energy return are many of the qualities that the cover demonstrates along with an outstanding feel against the club face.

The Finishing

The Chromax golf ball is finished with two layers of the highest grade polyurethane. This coating creates an attractive, durable and stain resistant finish.

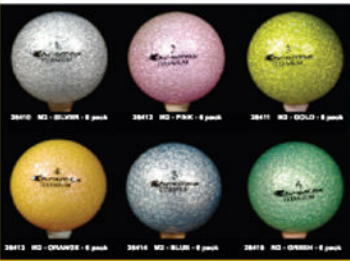

The Dimples

The patented 432 dimples on Chromax metallic golf balls are arranged in carefully designed patterns. Composed of several different size dimples, from .125" to .160" diameter, the design creates aerodynamic properties that produce an amazing trajectory and spin. The design also allows the ball to lend holding the green and produces low drag with optimum lift for distance.

Compression - 75±10%

A true 75 low compression provides exceptionally soft feel and substantially better spin.

On short and mid-iron shots, the HPF and thin soft DuPont Surlyn cover unite to provide the spin that golfers need to hold the green.

B 4 3 2

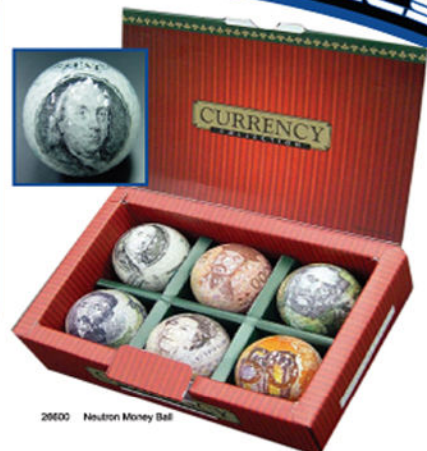

Distance: The Synthesized resin Core produces an extremely high initial velocity at impact. Once airborne, the B-432 dimple design provides a piercing trajectory and maximum ball speed resulting in shallow angle of descent for longer carry and added roll.

Performance: Not only is B-432 unique in color but it carries exceptional resilience. Engineered for serious players seeking exceptional distance, accuracy, and soft feel. With less slicing and hooking you can expect consistent performance from B-432.
